

Agriculture Radio Legend Mike Adams to Deliver Monmouth College Wiswell-Robeson Lecture on Sept. 12

MONMOUTH, Ill. – Agriculture radio legend Mike Adams will deliver this year’s Monmouth College Wiswell-Robeson Lecture.

The talk – which is free and open to the public – will be at 7 p.m. Monday, Sept. 12, in the College’s Dahl Chapel and Auditorium.

Adams recently retired from a nearly five-decade career as a radio ag journalist, which included serving as host of the national radio talk show Adams on Agriculture.

Adams earned a plethora of accolades over his nearly 48-year career, including serving as president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasting and recipient of the national Farm Broadcaster of the Year award.

The Wiswell-Robeson Lecture was founded in 2016 through a gift from 1960 Monmouth graduate Jeanne Gittings Robeson of Monmouth. The lecture’s purpose is to annually feature a speaker from the agriculture community who explores issues, challenges and innovations in the industry. Robeson and her late husband, Don Robeson, who was a 1954 Monmouth graduate, operated their farm in Warren County.
